LINCOLN SCHOOL OF ART AND DESIGN.

REPORT.

THE Committee of the Lincoln School of Art, in presenting their Annual Report, have great satisfaction in being able again to record the successful progress of the institution.

As this is the first printed Report which the Committee have issued, they think it right to refer to the circumstances of the School from its commencement.—

It was opened on February 2nd, 1863; the necessary funds for providing furniture, casts, &c., having been kindly contributed by various friends of the undertaking, and Mr. E. R. Taylor, one of the Certificated Masters of the Department of Science and Art, was appointed to conduct it. Great difficulty, however, was experienced in procuring a suitable room, the essential requisites being good light, central situation, and low rent. The most eligible which could at that time be found, was at the Corn Exchange, but it very soon became evident, from the rapid increase in the number of Students, not only that the School was supplying a need in the City, but that enlarged accommodation was absolutely necessary. The Committee, therefore, felt that it was incumbent upon them to make a fresh effort to supply this demand, and the more so, inasmuch as, from the very crowded state of the Evening Classes, it was manifest that the School was doing its legitimate work, and that its value in improving artistic taste, and the general powers of observation and intelligence was appreciated by that class of society, for whom such institutions are principally designed—those who derive their income from skilled labour.

Negotiations were accordingly entered into with the Committee of the National School for the erection of the present room above the National School, in Silver-street, and the Committee of the School of Art desire here to express their deep sense of the very kind and liberal manner in which their request was entertained.

The sum of £412 11s. 9d. was raised by voluntary contribution towards the cost of the present building, and the Committee take this opportunity of offering their grateful thanks to those who so kindly assisted them in their effort, as also to the Department of Science and Art, for the very liberal grant of £250, by which they are enabled to congratulate themselves on being free from debt.

Having thus secured very eligible premises, both as to size and situation, your Committee found that the change of locality was immediately followed by an enlarged attendance of Students, as will be seen by a reference to the Report of the Master, thereby necessitating the appointment of an Assistant Master, the duties of which office have been very satisfactorily discharged by Mr. Grason.

Your Committee have to record, with much gratitude, the following gifts and loans, which have been made to the School: the Rev. C. P. Terrot, several valuable water-colour paintings on loan, and a framed picture of the Tower of Lincoln Cathedral from the Vicars' Court; T. Trotter, Esq., a valuable work in folio, on Ironwork Design, by Digby Wyatt; W. Foster, Esq., a plaster figure, and a curious boot of the date of King William III., found at Algarkirk; Mrs. Keyworth, casts of carvings from Lincoln Cathedral; a Prize of £5 for Design has also been offered by J. Ruston, Esq.—Your Committee trust that the liberal example set by these donors may be followed by others.

Your Committee have, during the past two years, purchased from the funds at their disposal, as opportunities have presented themselves, several artistic objects to form groups for painting, and also some valuable books of reference, their object being gradually to form with these, together with the gifts from the Department, a library of Works on Art, in connection with the School, to which the Students may have access, and thus derive advantages which would be beyond their means, as private individuals. A list of these works will be found attached to this Report.

Inspections have been held by S. Hart, Esq., R.A., Eyre Crowe, Esq., and J. Moody, Esq.

Works have also been forwarded to London, the results of which are detailed in the Master's Report, and your Committee have received the following very favourable report from the Department.

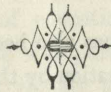

"In the National Schools the number of children is large, and they are well taught.

"The Classes in the School of Art are also much above par: more especially the numbers in the artizan branch, who, I noticed, worked with great zeal and assiduity, only the result of good self-discipline and interest in their work.

"Mr. Taylor deserves very great credit for the manner in which he has seconded the efforts of the Secretary to render this an effective School, after such brief experience in its working. I chose two, out of several, time sketches, to go up for national competition.

(SIGNED) EYRE CROWE."

In conclusion, your Committee have the most unfeigned pleasure in recording their high sense of Mr. Taylor's services as Master. They feel sure that their opinion will be endorsed by every Student who has had the advantage of his intelligent, conscientious, and straightforward earnestness in his work.

MASTER'S REPORT.

The Report I have to present to your Committee for the past year is, in every respect, very satisfactory, and such as must speak for the steady prosperity of your School.

In my last Report I had but one complaint, viz., want of room.— This want has been quickly met by the liberality of the town, and of the Science and Art Department.

The rooms well answer their purpose, and the lighting has proved both successful and economical.

Though this Report includes but two months of our occupying the present rooms, a considerable increase took place in the numbers attending, especially in the Evening Classes.

The comparative statement for the two years during which the School has been open, is as follows:—

	First Year.			Second Year.
Ladies' Morning Class	18	..	..	23	..	..
General Afternoon Class	18	..	..	30	..	..
Private School Class	16	..	..	16	..	..
Evening Class	69	..	..	94	..	..
Pupil Teachers' Class	25	..	..	29	..	..
	137			192

Increase, 55.

And I may be allowed to add that a further improvement has taken place during the present year.

The work of the School has also been most satisfactory, as will be seen by the results of the examination by the Science and Art Department; but the most marked improvement during the year, has been in the work of the Morning Class.

This Class had considerably decreased, through the efforts made to establish a true system of drawing and painting, by means of careful studies from nature in light and shade, and afterwards in color, thus imparting a real power and constantly increasing source of pleasure, but requiring a proportionate amount of work to attain. These efforts have now been successful, and this Class, in its numbers and work, is very satisfactory.

The Examinations, conducted by the Science and Art Department, are as follows :

A selection of the works done during the year is forwarded to London, and they are there examined by some of the highest authorities in art. To the best of these works, if up to the required standard, Medals, Honorable Mentions, and National Medallions are awarded ; also an Art Inspector is sent from the Department, and conducts an examination,—the Students, in his presence, making certain drawings within an hour. These are forwarded to London, and to the best, Prizes are awarded, and to the second-best, Certificates of having passed successfully the examination.

We have received, as a gift from the Science and Art Department, a number of valuable examples of ornament, models and casts, also examples and works of art, to the value of £34, given on account of the Medals obtained.

This is in addition to the aid given by the Department to the building fund, also in purchasing examples, loan of works of art, and the amount received from the Department by the Master.

In conclusion I can confidently point to the result hitherto attending the work of your School as proving, that the imparting of a true art-power is an essential part of education,—that it has a value in the interest of artizans,—that those who pursue it at their leisure desire to have that training which shall impart to them a real power when out among the beauties of nature.

EDWARD R. TAYLOR.
